DEAR APM:

Question: I have found a vertical cylinder cabinet with an unusual sticker inside the front door. It measures about 5½" square, with a deckled border, and shows Edison demonstrating a Class M electric phonograph to a group of people. When does this date from?

K.A., Brooklyn, NY

Answer: The engraving you refer to was first used as a souvenir design at the Chicago World's Fair of 1893 and was not used after that. Edison (or North American) took space at the Electricity Building in Jackson Park, Chicago, (Section S, Space 2). The souvenirs appeared in at least 3 languages - the word Souvenir, Recuerdo, or Andenken will give the clue.

Question: I have found a brown wax cylinder "Vivace" (Liszt, Rhap. No. 2) of a piano solo made by F. Oscar Elmore. Can you date this?

L.G., Portland, OR

Answer: Elmore was a pianist and organist who made solo records for the Lyric Phonograph Co. in 1898 and 1899. Sometimes he accompanied the violinist Wm. Cohen. His records sold for $1.00 apiece.

In Memoriam: Milford H. Fargo

T.C. Fabrizio

Milford Fargo was my friend. Moreover, he was the friend of anyone who ever picked up a record and played it for sheer enjoyment. Milford Fargo was a record collector, scholar, singer, musician. He died May 8, 1986 after suffering a heart attack, at the age of 58.

Though visited in recent years by uncertain health, Milford pursued his collecting and research as vigorously as anyone of whom I can think. He loved acquiring new cylinders or discs in any of the manifold fields of interest to which he was attracted. Best known for his dedication to the oeuvre of early recording artist Ada Jones, dubbed by him the "First Lady of the Phonograph", he enthusiastically sought records in areas as diverse as doggerel pop songs and Light Opera. More importantly, he knew what he was talking about. His radio show, "Sounds Like Old Times", produced by WXXI in Rochester, NY, stands as a model of what programs about vintage music should be and so often aren't.

As a professor of Music Education at Rochester's Eastman School of Music, Milford distinguished himself, and his work with children's choral ensembles was widely recognized. Lately, in retirement, he was concentrating on the enlarging of his archive on Ada Jones, Gladys Rice, Harry Tally, Sam Ash and his other favorite singers. The last time I saw Milford was at his home about a week before he died. In the finest of spirits, he played for me his latest composition, "Sandy, the Christmas Cat", a song with catchy tune and lyrics which he hoped would become popular at Holiday time. I handed him, with a smile, a record that he had long wanted, and which I had long pretended to withhold. I hope the voices of all other record collectors will echo with mine as I say, "May God rest his soul."

He is survived by his wife Lois, a son and a daughter.

Variations on a Theme - The Rarer HMV Needle Tins

Ruth Lambert

As the ubiquitous needle tin developed from the first wooden boxes, manufacturers applied continuing ingenuity to this most humble of talking machine accessories. My first article (see APM, Vol. VII, no. 9) covered some of the more common tins; I will describe some of the more unusual ones here.

The Tungstyle (Tungs-Tone)

This very thin tin (introduced at the beginning of World War I as steel manufacture became devoted to the war effort) measured about 2" long, 1" wide and about 1/4" thick. The tungsten point, which promised 150 plays, was inserted through a brass holder which gave the added advantage that the point could be turned without damage to the record. Earlier steel needles should never be turned in the reproducer or used needles mixed up with new ones, as damage could easily occur to the record. The Tungs-Tone tins were designed to be slipped into a snug holding clip in the top of the Victrola and, as a result, they are frequently found scratched. It opened out with the two lids flat and the central section, holding the 8 needles, rising vertically in the air. At one shilling per tin (5 pence), they were quite a good value. Full instructions were printed on the tin and frequently on a leaflet enclosed in the tin. They came in three loudnesses only:

1. Soft Tone - green tin
2. Loud Tone (Full) - red tin with white writing and also the colors reversed, cream tin with red writing (on a "gold" background).
3. Extra Loud Tone - Blue tin with white writing and also reversed, a cream tin with blue writing.
4. There is also a "Sample" tin with gold and black stripes and the design is changed.

A small variation concerns the appearance (or non-appearance) of the word "patent" underneath the name.

Aluminum "Matchstrickers"

This is a set of three embossed tins, each having a match striker on the back. Presumably, the idea was that the tin was kept after emptying and used for matches. Only three tones were available - soft, half, and loud. They came as a set of three in the orange HMV box. These were made around 1923 and are a nice set to get.

Set of Four Early (1905) Tins

These have much the same design as the common ones, but are much rarer and much earlier tins. They all held 200 steel needles (single play).

8. The "Pianissimo" - Green tin that held very soft needles. Also rare in that the tin is only half the thickness of the other tins.

9. The "Piano" needle - Yellow tin that held half-loud needles.

10. "Forte" - Red tin holding loud needles, unusual in that there is no tone written on the lid. Later on, the "loud tone" was written.

11. The "Melba" needle - A very rare blue tin. The needles were supposed to be used a few times on a new record, before any other needles. Instructions on the lid.

Embossed HMV

12. The earliest of all the tins and probably one of the earliest of ANY needle tins, 1903-1907. A dull gray, embossed tin with the dog and horn gramophone, used before the logo on the records? No writing at all on the lid. There appears to be an American equivalent.

Shaped HMV Needle Tins

13. 3-Compartment HMV - This tin held 600 needles and was sold from 1910 onwards. The three compartments were Forte (red), Piano (yellow), and Pianissimo (green).

14. 4-Compartment - Of these three tins, it's the most common, although still relatively rare. There are 4 sections of 600 needles (200 loud, 200 half, 200 soft), and a used section for retired needles. In 1921 it sold for 3 shillings (15p) and it came in a box.

15. 5-Compartment - Along with the three compartment, the rarest of the tins. It had five sections, four for needles and one for used needles. Under it was a slide for letting them out, and the inside lid was inscribed with the tones, see photo. This was also the earliest of the tins, 1903-1910. It contained: Melba (blue), Forte (red), Piano (yellow), Pianissimo (green), and used. A wonderful tin; there is also a German equivalent.

Round Nickel-Plated

16. There are two different sorts, but the design of the tins is the same. A deep round tin of 4 compartments, which cost 3 shillings (15p) from 1924 to 1939. The four sections used 3 for needles and the fourth for used ones, the top sliding around when needed. The difference in the two tins to collect is that on one the dog and gramophone is embossed, where on the other, the dog and gramophone is only a line drawing.

Obviously many countries had HMV tins and just changed "His Master's Voice" into their own languages, so the other photos included here show various HMV's from other countries.

- a. American embossed Victor, similar to no. 12.
- b. & c. German tins, showing two differing designs.
- d. Japanese Victors
- e. & f. American Victors holding 5000 and 100 needles.
- g. Spanish "embossed" tins and different Japanese tin.

If there are additional questions on these interesting varieties, please write to me.

Was It a Bird? Was It A Plane?

No - It Was a UFO and Edison Shot It Down!

Most of our readers no doubt believe that the UFO phenomenon is fairly recent — dating from 1947 or so. But there is truly nothing new under the sun, as witness the Great Airship Controversy of 1897, which lasted nearly 6 months, covered half the United States, and did not end until T.A.E. himself pronounced it impossible!

The hysteria and reports started in Oakland, California on November 22, 1896 when some streetcar passengers reported a cigar-shaped object in the sky emitting a bright light, and going at the rate of 20 miles an hour. The Oakland Tribune presented a sober view and attributed the phenomenon to an unknown inventor, a theme that was later picked up by other papers. Soon it had grown to 100 feet long and flew into the wind at an altitude of 1500 feet. It soon disappeared somewhere near San Francisco and San Lorenzo.

But the "airship" was not gone for good. It slowly moved eastward as various newspaper accounts reported, toward Salt Lake City, Denver, Omaha, Kansas City, and finally, Chicago. Some thought it signaled the end of the world - others saw a religious revival. It was finally at Chicago that the airship was brought to earth.

Hundreds of people claimed to have seen the contraption, even photographed it. Numerous people came forward to claim credit for the invention, and finally a spate of letters to the editor gave more details, mostly of a "hoaxing" nature. Dramatically, the New York Herald reported that on April 17, 1897, the airship had actually dropped a message inside a hollow reed with red, white and blue streamers. Inside, a letter, in code, was addressed to none other than Thomas Edison himself! It was signed "C.L. Harris, electrician, Airship N. 3."

When the letter was brought to Edison, he replied: "This is the latest, isn't it? You can take it from me that this is a pure fake. I have had several men in my employ, but I know nothing of C.L. Harris... It is absolutely absurd that a man would construct a successful airship and keep the matter secret. When I was young, we used to construct big colored paper balloons, inflate them with gas and they would float for days. Whenever an airship is made, it will not be in the form of a balloon. It will be a mechanical contrivance, which will be raised by means of a very powerful motor of little weight... I am not, however, figuring on inventing an airship. I prefer to devote my time to objects which have some commercial value. At best airships would be only toys."

The reply is charmingly Edison — he is able to dismiss the reports easily by reasoning that no one would keep such an invention secret - and nonetheless, he sees no commercial value to the device anyway!

As April faded away, the reports died down. Apparently, the pronouncement by America's greatest inventor was enough, in and of itself, to completely demolish all future reports. Edison was busy bringing the Home phonograph to market, America was recovering from the Depression of 1893, and most Americans were not yet suspicious that foreign powers were working on devilish devices.

What caused the original reports themselves? Was it a natural phenomenon (clouds, stars) or manmade (hot air balloons), or simply a mass hysteria? The expectation that even the air would soon be conquered certainly made the whole episode more plausible. It is ironic indeed that Thomas Edison, the inventor of so many astonishing machines, was the only one who could shoot down this early UFO! □

Readers who are interested in pursuing the matter further are encouraged to look at The UFO Enigma by Donald Menzel and Ernest Taves, New York: Doubleday, 1977.

BOOK (and RECORD) REVIEWS

Look For the Dog, by Robert Baumbach, 335 pp.

Garry Wetstein

Although Victor products are among the most universally collected, collectors' needs in recent years have been met only by (well-done) reissues of original trade catalogs. Finally, much of the scattered material has been brought together in this handsome 6" by 9" hardcover book, with much data available nowhere else. I discovered the book almost by accident, at a Tri-State Music Show, and discussed the book's strong and weak points with collectors there, and thought I would pass them on.

The book is very well organized, beginning with the outside horn machines and covers almost all the Victrolas, acoustic and electric. The illustrations all come from Victor catalogs and service manuals, which lends a certain authenticity to the material. However, this method does have its limitations as the cabinets of the horn machines (shown in 24 pages), for example, are barely an inch in size, making accurate analysis of cabinet style changes next to impossible. There are so many fine collections of Victor machines around that it would have been a relatively easy matter to include some detailed photos of "real machines". But each photo is accompanied by observations about size, styles, prices, and other historical matters.

The strongest feature of the book is the methodical and chronological development of the Victrola. The section devoted to them purports to be complete, but does lack some important details. For example, where is Model 4-5? Actually, it is lurking in these pages, but otherwise known as the Colony. And where is the Victrola Model No. 150 of 1921 which sold for $350.? Or the Victrola 8-2 of 1925 which sold for $310.? Or the Model 14-1 of 1926 which sold for $275.? Is it possible that these were never advertised?

The book contains much else besides identification of most of Victor's machines. There are sections on Victor talking machine manufacture, illustrated instructions for servicing a variety of Victor machines (from company documents), production figures by year (not model), a series of unusual patents, data on Orthophonics, and a somewhat bare-bones bibliography.

Some of the explanations (about serial number ranges and models, for example) are not accurate; the One series of machines does not have separate serial numbers, but combined ones. The reason for Eldridge Johnson naming his company Victor just repeats an old myth about his winning a court suit; actually, there were so many injunctions, suits and counter suits, that this was no clear-cut or likely reason for the naming in 1901; the name Victor was used by Johnson as a brand even before he named his company. His products abounded with regal names: Royal, Monarch, Victor the First, etc. There is also nothing about John Bailey Browning, the inventor of the Victrola (according to the Supreme Court); Johnson is made out to be the sole creator.

Despite these details, the book is certainly a must-have for any serious collector. It is available from the author for $20.00 at Stationery X-Press, P. O. Box 207, Woodland Hills, CA 91364.

A New (Old) Picture Cylinder (reviewed by Allen Koenigsberg)

Disc collectors have always had a greater choice when looking for unusual records. Now Dennis Valente and Peter Dilg of the Electrophone Cylinder Record Company have done the impossible - produced the first picture cylinder, and an unbreakable one to boot! They have selected one of the rarest recordings of Edison's voice - the Liver Story of 1906 (originally made for in-house use for Walter Miller). The material is transparent vinyl with a gold and black silhouette of the Old Man himself beneath the grooves. The sound on APM's cylinder is excellent, and is also accompanied by a typescript of the amusing anecdote. The Electrophone Company of 32 S. Tyson Ave., Foral Park, NY 11001 (516-775-8605) has other titles available also (on black vinyl), generally at $8.95 each. Rare historical issues, like the Edison Picture Cylinder, sell for $15.00; postage is $1. per record. Collectors are recommended to send a SASE for a complete list, while available.

Pictorial History of the Edison Lamp (General Electric)

Some of Edison phonograph fans also collect other items made by this famous company. Now Charlie Hummel, of 61 Laurel Drive, Wayne, NJ 07470 (201-696-3130) has re-issued a rare and attractive 5½" by 8" booklet of 20 pages illustrating in beautiful detail the milestones in electric light bulbs from 1879 to 1914. The quality of printing is so fine that only the facsimile notice in the back gives a clue that this is a modern color reproduction. It sells for a reasonable $4.95 plus 50¢ postage and is highly recommended. □

FROM THE GOLDEN AGE... HEIFETZ, A JEWEL AMONG FIDDLERS

Joe Klee

When I began this column, my intention was to chronicle recordings from the vocal repertoire exclusively... after all the acoustic era was primarily an age of vocal recordings. Primarily, yes,, but not exclusively. Just as the voices of Caruso, Scotti and Sembrich proved extremely well suited to the limitations of horn recording so did the violin, especially in the hands of Maud Powell, Mischa Elman, Fritz Kreisler and Efrem Zimbalist. Then on November 9, 1917, a 16-year-old Russian emigree named Jascha Heifetz stood before the horn at Victor's Camden studio and played August Wilhelmj's violin transcription of Franz Schubert's Ave Maria. Thus began an association that lasted over half a century.

In 1971, to celebrate Heifetz' 60th birthday, RCA issued a six-volume, 24-lp "Heifetz Collection". Volume one covers the acoustic era, Volume two contains the early electrics, and Volume three included recordings of complete concerti and sonatas as well as encores. By this time, the electrification of phonograph turntable motors and the eventual advent of the automatic changer equipped the phonograph for longer works. Volume four contains historic recordings pairing Heifetz with major conductors and orchestras in major concerti of the violin repertoire. Volume five - the last 78s - and Volume six - the early LPs - will not be considered here.

The same generous booklet, covering the entire six volumes, is included with each boxed set in the series. It includes an appreciation of Jascha Heifetz by the late Joseph Wechsberg and a survey of Heifetz' recording career by Irving Kolodin, who also wrote the unsigned brief liner notes for each volume. There are many fascinating photographs, a complete (as of that point) discography and a brief biographical summation by producer John Pfeiffer.

I always tend to distrust artistic assessments of liner notes anyway. Record company publicists know full well which side their bread is buttered on and any outsider (even a Kolodin or a Wechsberg) knows why they are hired and tries to do the job at hand, which may even include praising the company's artist into premature sainthood. Therefore, I consulted Boris Schwarz' Great Masters of the Violin, published by Simon & Schuster (not RCA). Turning to the chapter on Heifetz, I found an assessment in excess of anything in RCA's booklet!

"There has probably never been a violinist who has approached the summit of perfection more closely than Heifetz."

This quotation came from the Memoirs of Carl Flesch... a man not easily given to adulation and praise.

Established, given and accepted that Heifetz has indeed approached the summit of perfection more closely than any other, we can also allow that this speaks more about technique than soul, spirit or interpretive powers. For these, we can do no better than examine the evidence at hand. Starting with the 1927 Ave Maria, one can hear golden threads of a musicality all the way from the baroque of Bach to the then contemporary Walton. Heifetz brought to everything he played an artistry, an intensity and a dedication which must be admired in this age of performers who seem blessed (or cursed) with the ability to make everything they do sound the same. Yet there is a Heifetz identity. A violinist/teacher of my acquaintance claims he can identify Heifetz' playing by one phrase if not one note. I've never put him to the test. There's no need to. It is true of every great artist that there is an individuality which at least the professional musician, if not all enlightened listeners, can spot immediately. In the case of Heifetz, it is a flawless technique which, even if occasionally flaunted in front of the audience, does not obscure the musical values.

It is also important to differentiate between the listener (auditory) image and the viewer (visual) image, for many is the time that attendance at a Heifetz concert or a viewing of a Heifetz television appearance involves dealing with the imperious stature, the aristocratic bearing, the great stone face that is the visual image of Jascha Heifetz. So close your eyes and listen to these records. Listen especially to Volume 4, side 6, band 1, the Larghetto movement of Beethoven's D Major Violin Concerto recorded by Heifetz with Arturo Toscanini and the NBC Symphony Orchestra in 1940. It is the epitome of warmth and sensitivity. Listen again to the acoustics from 1917 to 1924... Volume one. These were recorded at a time when Fritz Kreisler and Mischa Elman had made the portamento style of violin playing very much the fashion. Yes, the famous Heifetz slide is there but never exaggerated or predictable. From the very beginning, Heifetz was leading the way to a new school of violinism... one in which the player attacked each note squarely and surely and none more squarely or surely than Heifetz.

Actually Heifetz had made a few recordings in Russia (1911) before coming to the United States. He continued to record as late as 1972. He had a long career. He overtook his predecessors. He eclipsed, or very nearly so, his contemporaries. The ghostly shadows of his influence have followed those who followed him. The Heifetz star still shines as a goal to be striven for... seldom if ever attained. Never was this more evident than the February 1986 "Heifetz Birthday Issue" of The Strad magazine in which musical luminaries such as Yehudi Menuhin, Itzhak Perlman, Josef Gingold, Isaac Stern, Pinchas Zukerman, Brooks Smith, Franz Rupp and Schuyler Chapin were asked to set down their thoughts, reminiscences and impressions. The phrases kept repeating themselves like variations on a theme. Brilliant sound was most frequently mentioned, followed by left hand intonation, right hand bowing and phrasing and the ease with which the man played. Clearly the impression Heifetz made upon his peers, and those who would aspire to being his peers, is beyond question.

His influence on the repertoire is also of major importance. His inclusion of the music of Joseph Achron in his repertoire is probably the major reason, if not the only reason, that this Jewish music of great beauty is not lost to today's audience. His violin transcriptions of music by George Gershwin, Leopold Godowsky, and Stephen Foster made them a permanent part of the violin recital repertoire. And what would have been the fate of the Sibelius Violin Concerto had it not been for the earthshaking 1935 recording by Heifetz and Sir Thomas Beecham? Who else but Heifetz would have dared risk his stellar reputation on such little known music as that of Castelnuovo-Tedesco, Korngold, or Miklos Rosza? And who else but Heifetz would have climaxed a career of recitals and concerti with an emphasis on Chamber Music that reminded us of the too-oft forgotten beauty of Beethoven's string trios and Schubert's C Major Quintet. And what of Dinicu's Hora Stacato, a work which certainly owes its continued presence to Heifetz? The musical world would have been much the poorer without any of these... and they all passed through Jascha Heifetz on their way to a place in the repertoire.

True, sometimes Heifetz wasted his talent on what could only be called, for want of a better word, "dreck". A disastrous attempt at pop songwriting under the assumed name of Jim Hoyle landed deservedly at the bottom of the garbage heap, despite a recording which utilized the talents of Bing Crosby. And, if I never hear Robert Russell Bennett's Hexopada Suite again, I will miss it not. But then Kreisler cast his pearls before Turkey in the Straw and Poor Butterfly... so what can one do!

Just how important was Heifetz? We'll probably never know for sure because that would presuppose imagining a world without him.

One can have a lot of fun with the items in the first four volumes of "The Heifetz Collection". The first game is comparing the acoustics with the electrics. Schubert's Ave Maria and Bazzini's Ronde des lutins are included as recorded both before the horn and in front of the microphone.

There is at least one serious slip in the dubbing of the 78s. In the first movement of the Brahms Double Concerto, the speed of two of the 78 rpm sides is not correctly matched in pitch. An annoying error, but considering the scope of the project, an error to be expected and even forgiven.

Later Heifetz stereo LP recordings of the 1950s duplicate much of this repertoire and while the solist is as strong as ever throughout, there are vast differences in recorded sound (stereo LP versus electric 78s) and in accompaniments. In the Brahms Violin Concerto, Fritz Reiner and the Chicago Symphony prove to be more vital and exciting partners for Heifetz than did Serge Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony in 1939. The Reiner/Heifetz collaboration is available on LP from RCA as well as on a compact disc coupled with a '50s stereo remake of the Beethoven Violin Concerto with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In the case of the Brahms I'd opt for the Reiner (stereo) recording but in the Beethoven, I'd go for the 1940 Toscanini/Heifetz mono collaboration. With two artists of this calibre the results are equal to far more than the sum of the parts.

Here then is Heifetz from acoustic to electric... 1917 to 1945 (or for the purposes of this review, 1917 to 1941)... excerpted snippet to full length concerto. It's the kind of survey one could wish for every major artist. But not every major artist retains his powers that long... not every artist has committed such an extensive repertoire to be recorded by one major label... not every artist is Jascha Heifetz. And that, I guess, is what makes the difference. □

WHERE ARE THEY NOW?

Over this past summer we have tried to go through our entire mailing list (about 5000 names) and design a new mailing label which would allow us to print labels in zip code order. As a result of this computerized process, we have located over 500 people who subscribed to APM at one time or another since 1973 and allowed their subscriptions to lapse or failed to notify us of their changes of address. We would like to notify these people of the issues still due them or send them a new book list, and so have instructed our new data base (RB5000) to print out all people who have moved. Their names follow below in alphabetical order. If you know any of these collectors and their current addresses, would you please notify us so that their subscriptions can be continued and they can rejoin the hobby! All those helping to locate current addresses will be sent a special prize. Thanks again!

NOTICE

We are reminded by Bob Shedlarz of Navarre, Ohio that we erred in the last issue on the measurement of the first wax disc records (vertical cut, center-start) made by Columbia in 1899 -they are 3 3/8" in diameter.

Jim Collings, of Oklahoma City, OK, adds some data to our list of Victor phonographs and the quantities manufactured (APM, VIII, 3): Model 9-55 was manufactured in 2,045 units.

Bruce Miller writes: "In my review in the last issue (Nellie Melba: A Contemporary Review by Wm. R. Moran), the reference to Melba's sole surviving Paris recording was incorrectly attributed to the Australian RCA collection. The recording, On M'appelle Mimi from La Boheme, is included in EMI's Nellie Melba: The London Recordings (RLS 719). Mea culpa!"
